Governor Considers Scheme More Important than Construction of Erie Canal.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Albany, March 15. -Governor Dix is now bending every effort he can spare from his political differences with Tammany Half over Public Service commissioner ships to the carrying out of his conservation programme. His highest ambition is to secure the passage by the Legislature of the State Conservation Commission bill. providing for the scientific development ervation of the state's water power and the complete ownership by the tale within fifty years of the water power through a sinking fund process. The Governor said this afternoon that if ne action were not taken on this bill he would probably send a special message to the Legislature dealing with the matter me time next week, as well as one relating to the primary law amendments, which he is now preparing. There are hints of an extra session being called if no action is taken on the two propositions, but the Governor would make no comment on this phase of the question.

Speaking of the conservation bill, how ever, he did say that if it did not become law at this session of the Legislature it is the measure that will eventually become law, as the people will demand it. He con siders it of even greater importance to the people than the construction of the original

The Governor distinguished between the Ferris bill, which was drafted by a legislative investigating committee, and the Conservation Commission bill by saying that the former was only a quasi-public proposition, which would develop the power of only a few streams, while the latter would develop the power of every stream in the state. He added:

I am looking upon this proposition from the viewpoint of the public. This will not only develop the power along the barge canal, but it will harness the power of every branch stream of the state. It will develop a force up to a large, definite unit of nearly 2,000,000-horsepower. No constitutional amendment is needed to put it into effect. By the sinking fund process no extra tax will be required. It is merely utilizing that which the public already owns and which is now going to waste.

Outrage, Says Carmody. Albany, March 15 .- Characterizing Architect William J. Beardsley's claim for $60. 000, the balance alleged to be due for plans for the Wingdale prison, as "unconscionable and outrageous," and advising that suit be brought to recover $193,000 already paid, Attorney General Carmody forwarded an opinion to the Commission of New Prisons to-day, recommending that the $60,-000 claim be rejected.

The construction of the Great Meadov prison, at Comstock, being carried on successfully under the supervision of the State Archifect, in whose office the plans were drawn, the Attorney General cites as a demonstration that Mr. Beardsley's services were unnecessary and the expenditure
